

Evening Post

Ethiopian food is worth celebrating

REVELLERS eager to enjoy a taste of Ethiopian culture packed a Central Reading venue during a celebration evening.

More than 100 people flocked to RISC in London Street to take part in the event, which was organised by chef extraordinaire Tutu Melaku.

Staff at the restaurant donned traditional costume and entertainment included Ethiopian food, music and dance.

Tutu, who is originally from the North East African country, took over the kitchen at the internationalist organisation about six months ago.

"It was personally very pleasing to see that the reputation of my restaurant in Reading has grown so much since opening at RISC only six months ago," Tutu said.

"We are now regularly welcoming people from the towns and villages all around Reading, even as far as Bristol and Oxford."

For information about Tutu's Ethiopian cuisine, call RISC on (0118) 958 6692.